How long have you worked there?

1. Conversation  Read, and fill in the spaces.

Scene: Tom is having a job interview. Sarah is asking him questions about his work history.

Sarah: So Tom, tell me about your current work experience.
Tom: Sure. I work for ABC Chemicals. I’m in charge of international sales.
Sarah: So, how long have you worked there?
Tom: Um, I've worked at ABC since 2016.
Sarah: OK. Where did you work before that?
Tom: I worked for Tennant Research. I was a Junior Analyst. I worked there for five years.
Sarah: Was that your first job?
Tom: Yes. Before that, I was at university.
Sarah: That's fine. Thank you.

Teaching Notes

Target Structure: Present Perfect with 'For' and 'Since'

Vocabulary: Business or General

Level: Intermediate

Time: 45 - 60 minutes

Preparation: None

Suggested Teaching Method

This worksheet compares the Present Perfect Simple with the Past Simple for finished and unfinished events. The worksheet also includes practice of 'for' and 'since'.

Important: There are two versions of the second page. The difference is the information gap activity in exercise five. Make sure that half of your class has one version (page 2a), and the other half has the other version (page 2b).

1. Have students speculate on the picture. What is happening? Who are the two people? If your students suggest a job interview, you might want to elicit or teach the words interviewer and candidate / interviewee.

Direct your students' attention to the words in the box. Students should read through the conversation, filling in the blanks. When finished, they should check in pairs. Finally, students should practise the conversation aloud once, and then change roles. Answer any vocabulary questions the students have.

2. Follow the instructions. Students can work in pairs for this exercise. Go through the answers on the board.

3. Students can work alone, and check their answers in pairs.

4. Students can work in pairs and check their answers against the original conversation.

5. Assign pairs. One person should have Peter's information. The other student should have Claire's information.

Students should ask questions and create a time line in the same style as exercise two.

You could offer additional assistance by having students ask questions about your job history. Write the time line on the board.

Students should swap roles when finished and then compare their answers with their partner.

6. Demonstrate with a confident student. If your students need extra help, run through the questions they will need before beginning.

Monitor the activity, making notes on errors you hear. When your students have finished, elicit some feedback and go through on the board some of the errors you heard.

The answer key is on the next page.
